Conflict of Interest Statement

Manuscript submissions must contain a declaration of conflict of interest that any of the authors may have with regard to the information on commercial or potentially commercial products. Conflicts of interest for a given manuscript exist when one or more author has ties to activities that could inappropriately influence his or her judgment, whether or not judgment is in fact affected. Financial relationship with industry (through investments, employment, consultancies, stock ownership, honoraria) are usually considered to be the most important conflicts of interest. For manuscripts involving work on products supported (wholly or partially) by commercial companies, a footnote should be added to acknowledge this fact.

It is the responsibility of the corresponding author to review this policy with all authors and to collectively list the appropriate commercial relationships. In case of a potential conflict of interest, the information must be provided to the Editor-in-Chief in the cover letter during the online submission process, in addition to completing the section below.
